DANVILLE, VA., January 17.—The Danville and New-River railroad, which was recently sold at public auction and bought in by the bondholders, has been reorganized under the name of the Danville and Western, and the following officers have been elected: J. Wilcox Brown, of Baltimore, president; J. C. Wrenshall, general superintendent, and G. K. Griggs, secretary and treasurer. Under the agreement the Richmond and Danville Company has sixty days within which to issue terest."
The same moustrious innocent who looked long upon an ancient atlas to find the exact geographical posttion of the river styr may go searching through the genealogical table of the nobility of England as recorded about the year 1709 for some clue to the ancestry of Sir Roger de Coverley, so it may be well to state clearly the authenticated knowledge as to his origin. pany has sixty days within which to issue their bonds, take up the bonds of the Danville and New-River, and own the road.

thenticated knowledge as to his origin.

That he was a foundling is known as a positive fact of his history. But, being a foundling of the imagination of Addison and Steel, as one of inspired creation he has long since been forgiven his lack of a grandfather, and as toster-child of the Tattler and Spectator partakes of their immortality.

As to his lofty title, which he wears with such an air of a grandee to "the manner born," it was bestowed upon him as the first and the noblest of a long line of "na-

His critice as well as his creators have possessed the peculiar gift of infusing the warm blood of life into his veins where his contemporaries have been nourished by ink alone.

See what Hazlitt thinks of Sir Roger de Coverley, Saga he:

Coverley. Savs he: "Who is there that can forget or be in-"Who is there that can forget or be insensible to the inimitable, nameless graces, and various traits of nature and of old English character in it—to his unpretending virtues and amiable weaknesses—to his modesty, generosity, hospitality, and eccentric whims—to the respect of his neighbors and the affection of his domestics—to his wayward, hopeless passion for his fair enemy the widow, in which there is more of real romance and true delicacy than in a thousand tables of knight-errantry?"

THROUGH THACKERAY'S GLASSUE.

THROUGH THACKERAY'S GLASSUS.

Then Thackeray, ever inclined to the severe, how mild, how gentle he is here:

"What would Sir Roger de Coverley be without his follies and his charming little brain-cracks? If the good knight did not call out to the people sleeping in church and say amen! with such a delightful pomposity; it he did not make a speech in the Assize Court, abronos des bottes, and merely to show his dignity to Mr. Spectator; if he did not mistake Madam Doll Tearsheet for a lady of quality in Temple Garden; if he were wiser than he is; if he had not his humor to salt his life, and were but a mere English gentleman and game preserver, of what worth were he to us? We love him for his vanities as much as for his virtues. What is ridiculous is delightful in him. We are so tond of him because we laugh at him so."

IT IS A PRIM DANCE.

So much for the personnel of him, for whom that quaintest, freshest, and oldest of country dances is named.

There always seems some distinct kinship between the Sir Roger de Coverley and the minuet, while really there is little save that of having reigned over the same age of folly. of having reigned over the same age of folly.

As two pictures they may hang in memory's hall as companion-pieces, but in the same frame never!

"Stately" belongs to the minuet;

"prim" to the Sir Roger de Coverley. The former unconsciously carries with it impressions of the grand salons, courtiers and fine ladies stiff with splendor, regal with jewels, laces, and brocades; watteaus and broidered stomachers, designated the garbs their highnesses wore, and watteaus and 'broidered stomachers, designated the garbs their highnesses wore, and excruciating elegance marked their mien. The Sir Roger de Coverley, more prim than precise, speaks to us of the good, kindly country-folk of old England, with their genuine and ingenious methods of innocent mirth. A sweet-faced Mistress Prue in a smart frock with a nosegay in her hand, might "lead off" in the simple figures with young Squire Bracegirdle, a well-mannered young gentleman with "a very tolerable periwig."

well-mannered young gentleman with "a very tolerable periwig."

We must conceive of its being danced with perfect propriety at some rural inn with perhaps the creaking sign of the "garter" or the "ram" hanging from it. to which some of its goodlie companie have journeyed in a "fly," while my lady arrives in a post-chariot. It was the genual day of coffee-houses, and of the May-pole, which would rise with its garlands and wreaths in the Strand in London. And so, ye towns-folk of Richmond, who would in time so short revive the days as well as the dance of Sir Roger de Coverley, bear ye well in mind that it is a simple country dance that you would reproduce, somewhat of an old-time cotillon.

FROGES, CAPS, AND HOOPS.

PROORS, CAPS, AND HOOPS.

Be sure you that it is a "freek" that you wear, with bib and tucker, reticule and mittens as accessories. A nosegay of marigolds and columbine would be most seemgolds and columbine would be most seemly to bear in the hand, while surmounting the chignon must be placed some manner of head-gear, in modern designation a cap, for such becometh the modesty of a gentlewoman. It would seem that hoops were the latest fashion of that day from the following extract from a letter to Sir bloger: Roger:
"Since your withdrawing from this place the fair sex are run into great extrava-gances. Their petticoats, which began to heave and swell before you left us, are now blown up into a most enormous concern, and rise every day more and more; in short, sir, since our women know themselves to be out of the eye of the Speciator they will be out of the eye of the Specialor they will be kept within no compass.

"You praised them a little too soon for the modesty of their head-dresses, for as the humor of a sick person is often driven out of one limb into another their superfluity of ornaments, instead of being entirely banished, seems only failen from their heads to their bodies. What they have lost in height they make; up in breadth, and contrary to all rules of architecture widen the foundations at the same time that they shorten the superstructure." time that they shorten the superstructure."
Some might do well to fashion their dancing-frocks by these most minutely set down proportions.

dancing frocks by these most minutely set down proportions.

Bow to your partner.

On this all important occasion, when the new world is to watch the old world tread the Sir Roger de Coverley in its very own way, dare not to forget and "bow to your partner." You must drop a curtsy to your corner or salute your opposite; wink not, but oggle at the pretty pink-cheeked lassies, and he who unwisely indulges too much in strong waters will then be "in his cups." Also, ye dancers of the sterner sex, with your curled and powdered periwigs, it is with an air of having once bowled along in a gig from Eton that you must must bear yourselves, and look the smart fop and frequenter of the coffee-houses in uncommonly fine stocks or neckerchiefs and broidered waistcoats. Be ye also equal to the wits of your day—Whig or Tory—making tender love passages to Sophia, Belinda, or Lady Harriet as you dance.

When so vast an interest is taken in such an event there are certain consolations which the over-conscientious will seek in condoning such a folly and in proving the art of dancing one of the oldest as well as most honorable of pastimes.

The minuet, that exquisite type of the "poetry of motion." was once attacked as being undignified. A lady as wise as she was beautiful aptly replied: "The Father of our Country danced the minuet, and it was not considered undignified." (Extract from Unwritten Memoirs of the Colonial Ball.)

COST JOHN THE BAPTIST'S HEAD.

In history, sacred as well as secular, ancient and modern alike, we find honorable mention of dancing. It was the excellence of a little maid's dancing that cost John the Baptist his head. In Athens historical dances taught lessons of the great events transpired.

Both the French and the Italians have written numberless volumes on the art.

Both the French and the Italians have written numberless volumes on the art, but a Parsian authority is quoted as having declared that "England has produced great men in the sciences and in the fine arts, but not one great dancer."

Herodotus gives us a quaint romance in which the King of Sieven determined to marry his daughter to the most distinguished man in Greece. So all the suitors were bidden to a feast. Merry with much wine and long dancing one of them called tor a table and danced upon it as to the custom of the Spartans, and after awhile even stood on his head. At that the King could coutsin himself no longer, so exclaimed "Son of Tisander you have danced away your wife."

Farmers Discuss a Plan to Get This Amount by Issuing State Bonds.

Correspondence of the Richmond Dispatch.

Scotland Neck, N. C., Jan. 17, 1891.

The farmers and others interested in the matter held a convention in Kinston today for the purpose of considering whether or not it will be wise for the State Legislature to pass an act allowing the State to issue bonds to the amount of ten million dollars and lend the money realized from the same to persons in the State on good real estate collateral.

JUST A TEMPORARY RELIEF.

The proposition is to limit the amount to be loaned to each man to $1,000, $2,000, or $3,000, and lend only half or three fourths of the value of the real estate which seures the loan. Some think this would be only temporary relief, but it was discussed in the convention at Kinston.

BLINDFOLDED, ROBBED, AND ABDUCTED.

At Swanquarter the store of Mr. W.

BUT FULL OF REAL PLEASURE. In queen elizabeth, My Lord Keeper would open the ball, and all the cabinet-ministers, judges and the reat of the "Most potent, grave and reverend Signiors" would take their part in the dance without at all thinking that they thereby degraded themselves, and a very distinguished man of the time of James I, is the proud author of abook entitled "The English Dancing-Master; or, Plaine and Easie Rules for the Dancing of Country Dances, with the tune of each dance."

Miss Loulie Lyons won the first ladies' prize, an exquisite turqoise ring. Mr. Malven Patterson, of North Carolina, won the first prize for gentlemen, a scarf-pin, design of wishbone holding a moonstone. Miss Janie Smith, a debutani beauty of Danville, won the ladies' booby, a pair of spectacles, and Paymaster Lovell the gentlement's booby, a pipe.

After the prizes had been presented the guests adjourned to the dining-room, where on small tables the guests' collation was served in courses. On the large centretable the decorations were yellow. Crystal candelabra with delicate yellow shades were placed at the corners of the table. The house was profusely decorated with palms and flowering plants. Among the lady guests were Misses Julia Morton, Boxie Scott, Virgie Brock, Bessie Pace, Sallie Talbott, Loulie Lyons, Loulie Powers, Irene Pleasants, Isabel Stacy, Sue Starke, Ines Hotchkiss, Annie Williams, Miss McTier, Knoxville, Tenn.; Miss Smith, Danville, and Miss Harris, of Louisville.

It is believed by some that they will extend it to the west, and by others that they will use the line from here to Cascade as a part of a new line to Winston. Others still believe that the Richmond and Danville has bought up the road simply to control the territory. A railroad-man here believes that the Danville and East Tennessee people can buy the road if they want it. There is little doubt, however, that it will be used by some corporation as a link in a new line from Danville to the West.

A most delightful affair was the tea given by the Misses Stringfellow on Friday evening to 150 of their young lady friends. It was a veritable bevy of beauty. The rooms were decorated beautifully, each being different. In the dining-room the chandelier was particularly effective. It was wreathed in smilax and on each globe, with its pink shade, was the similitude of a rose. In the library the shade chosen was red, in the parlor yellow, and in the halls lilac. Nonpole, Va., January 17.—The Norwe-gian steamship Banun, from Boston to Pensacola, Fla., went ashore three miles south of Currituck life-saving station this morning during a very heavy fog. She is lying bows on, with a rough sea. The crew of twenty-one men were taken off in boats by the life-saving men from Wales station. The Merritt wrecking-steamer J. Q. Jones left to render assistance. AUCTION SALES-Future Days.

BRING THE COMPLETE MACHINE-SHOPS OF H. M. SMITH & CO.. IN THE CITY OF RICHMOND, VA.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 28, 1891,

wednesday, January 28, 1891,
that DESIRABLE AND COMPLETE MANUFACTURING PLANT, consisting of the capacious Brick Work-Shops and Foundry, situated on the north side of Weinutaliey between Fifteenth and Seventeenth streets, and extending out to Franklin street, upon which there is a front of 32 feet and where there are several small stores or offices, which can be rented out separately if desired. These buildings are mostly four stories high, are strong, and well suited for factory uses, and have large foor capacity. A plat of the land will be shown by the auctioneer.
In these shops and to be sold with them are large quantities of most excellent, useful, and EXPENSIVE MACHINERY, now in daily use,
and consisting in part of Engine, Boiler, Lathes, Furnaces, Shaping Machines, Drill Presses, Saws, Mortsime- and Spoke-Machinery, Orinistones, Emory-Wheels, thousands of Patterns in iron and in wood, Patent-Rights, Trade-Marks, Forges, Elowers, Cupela, Flasks, and in fact every fixture and appliance necessary in a large and complete shop.
Here are presented circumstances that occur

every fixture and appliance necessary in a large and complete shop.

Here are presented circumstances that occur but seldom, and, kind reader, you are not likely again in your lifetime to have presented the opportunity for buying a large and well-arranged factory and foundry, fully equipped, in active and profitable operation, and with the good-will and large trade won and held by the labor of many years of an enterprising firm of high standing. It is likely that you can purchase this entire outfit, Real Estate, Machinery Patents, Patterns, good-will, material on hand, and an established trade, for less than one third of its value, and then you can go right on with and an established trade, for less than one third of its value, and then you can go right on with your business on the orders now on hand and that are coming in daily.

It being impossible to give in this advertisement every detail, I earnestly invite all proposing purchasers to inspect the plant before the day of sale, promising on my part every salistance to that end.

Tarms: One fourth of the purchase-money in cash and the residue in three equal payments
